

JAZZ IT UP

The Nash, an educational and performance venue near Downtown Phoenix, is bringing the joy of jazz right to you with virtual workshops and lectures. Its annual summer workshop series will be held via Zoom for musicians of all backgrounds and skill sets on topics like bebop and jazz composition. Instructed by professional jazz musicians including Lewis Nash, Dmitri Matheny and Pam Morita, most workshops are $150. The Nash will also continue its Get Jazz Smart online classes via Zoom, exploring bossa nova, modal jazz and fusion. Led by Jeff Libman, a clinical assistant professor of jazz studies at Arizona State University, classes are $25 per household. Learn more and register online. www.thenash.org.

ADMIRE ART

Even though museums remain closed, you can still take your creativity for a spin through Phoenix Art Museum's virtual events and exhibitions. From the comfort of home, explore the India: Fashion's Muse exhibit and get a virtual preview of an upcoming exhibit, Teresita Fernández: Elemental. First Friday will take place online June 5 at 6 p.m. via the museum's YouTube channel and Facebook page, and other events include mindfulness sessions, guided meditation, and mixed media workshops for teens. All events are free; some require registration. www.phxart.org.

WINE 101

LDV Winery is bringing food and wine pairings to your home with its "From the LDV Winery Vineyard Kitchen" Facebook Live series. On June 4 and 11 at 4 p.m., the LDV owners will host this free dinner demo with wine and pairing tips featuring items like chicken and veggie kabobs and New York steak with select LDV wines. Viewers can join in (recipes are provided on Facebook prior to each event), but cooking along isn't required. Participants can simply sip wine and enjoy some virtual socialization. The series' entire selection of wines is available for a 10% discount and can be picked up curbside at the Old Town tasting room or delivered. www.ldvwinery.com.

GREEN THUMB

The Urban Farm, a Phoenix-based company led by 40-year urban farming pro Greg Peterson, is providing free, virtual classes on gardening and growing your own food to help people take control of their health and food supply during this time of uncertainty. The live classes – with topics like berry gardening and edible landscaping – take place Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 p.m. and are available to replay for 48 hours. Sign up online and you'll get an email with how to access the classes. There is also a paid option ($97) that provides lifetime access to all courses (there are more than 50!). www.urbanfarm.org.
